Evening Star of Monday's date has the following item of local interest: "The Adirondack Granite company of Ausable Forks has been incorporated with the secretary of state with a capital of $1,000,000, to deal in granite and marble. The directors are E. W. Featherston, Albert E. Weinholz and W. A. McKenzie of Ausable Forks; W. A. Moore and J. H. Moore of Barre, Vt.; Edwin G. Moore of Plattsburg, Irving E. Burdick, E. A. Reaser and Samuel K. Schwenck of New York, and James E. Natchford of Syracuse."

The Scotch supper, served in the parlors of the First Baptist church last evening from 5 until 7 o'clock by the Young People's society of Christian Endeavor, was well patronized, as many as 100 persons partaking of the excellent menu, which was served with painstaking care. The bill of fare consisted of almost every known Scotch dish, and was a novel departure from the usual church supper. The proceeds amounted to over $25. The success of the occasion was due in large measure to the united skill of Mrs. George Glass and Mrs. Charles Cay, who were assisted by a committee from the society. The committee wish to thank all those who in any way contributed to the enjoyment of the evening.

Discerning a promising looking young buck among them, Mr. Tassie promptly lowered him with his trusty rifle. The animal weighed 150 pounds.

The ladies' aid society of the Barre Congregational church will hold a quilting party in the vestry Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. All ladies of the parish are cordially invited to come and spend a social afternoon. At 6 p. m., a parish supper will be served. No soliciting will be done, but each family is expected to furnish for the supper. Will not the members of the parish make this an evening long to be remembered? Some and enjoy the supper, social hour and inspire the pastor by your co-operation.

A still alarm of fire was received at the central station yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock. The chemical engine responded to what was at first thought to be a fire on Addison place. Someone residing in that vicinity saw what he supposed to be a fire in the house which stands at the end of the place. Investigation showed that a rubbish fire had been built in the rear of the house, and that the flames could be seen through the front and rear windows of the building. From the street, the fire had the appearance of being in the interior of the house, hence the false alarm.

At the Barre opera house Friday evening, November 11, What a lot to hear the bells, bells, silver-toned bells, and Harry Dunbar, the gifted impersonator, flute, cello and piano trios, quartet and vocal solos. Oh, yes; and Ralph Dunbar, whose cello solos have won for him splendid praise from exacting critics. The young men of the First Baptist church are confident that such an entertainment will appeal to the musical talent of Barre and vicinity. Tickets for this concert at the Eastern Estate ten store, the D. A. Perry real estate office and the Averill feed store.

Mrs. L. W. Wheeler of South Barre is visiting at the home of her daughter, Mrs. G. W. Mann of Wellington street. Although over 82 years old, Mrs. Wheeler is remarkably well preserved and has an excellent memory. She remembers many things which happened in Vermont over three score years ago. For the past 60 years she has kept a diary. She is obliged to wear glasses, but retains her vision enough to enable her to do sewing and fancy work. Mrs. Wheeler walked from Wellington street to Main street and returned last night and did not seem to be fatigued by the journey.

Brooks Relief camp, No. 18, of Montpelier held a memorial service last evening for the members who have died within a few months. The altar was draped and decorated with flowers. Prayer was offered by the chaplain and "Nearer, My God, to Thee" was sung. A memorial from the department and a letter of sympathy was read. Mrs. Tracy sang "The Vacant Chair," and Mrs. Baker read a short sketch of the life of Miss Bernice Richardson, saying she was the youngest member of the corps. Mrs. Ella Roberts read an article on the life of Mrs. Edmund Baker, who joined the corps about 20 years ago, and Emma LaPoint read a paper on the life of Ellen M. Seaver, who has been a member nearly 25 years. The meeting closed with the repeating of the Lord's prayer.

Notice to the Public.

The undersigned has done the shoe repairing for the Homer Fitts company since March, 1909, but voluntarily finished work for them October 19, 1910. People looking for No. 1 Union and Sherman oak shoes will find that quality at my shop. Cheap work is done with cheap leather; not in my line. Standard prices.

THE HORSE'S MOUTH.

When to Expect Teeth, and Care to Be Taken.

A colt's mouth does not ordinarily require attention until he has reached his second year, says H. E. Kingman of the Colorado agricultural college in the Southern Agriculturist. By the time the youngster is one year old, he has on each jaw, upper and lower, six front teeth, or incisors, and six grinders, or molars. Between the second and third years, a horse discards 12 teeth in all, which are replaced by permanent ones. These are the middle incisors and the first and second grinders on each side. During this time, very serious difficulties may be encountered. Frequently an incisor will fail to loosen and be tipped forward by the incoming tooth, until its sharp edge lacerates the lip. The wound may become infected and extremely swollen and sensitive, and the animal may be unable to chew, because of the pain. The same applies to the back teeth—one may fail to be shed and the permanent tooth is likely to push the temporary grinder out, so that the cheek is severely injured. An animal may rapidly lose flesh or actually starve to death from such an occurrence.

The third grinder is replaced at 3½ years. This baby tooth frequently fails to drop off, forms a cap over the permanent one, and is likely to keep the other teeth from grinding properly, or otherwise interfere with mastication. A horse at five years of age has a so-called full mouth. This means that all his teeth are permanent and in full wear. At one time, before the horse was a servant of man, he was provided with a full set of teeth, that is, there was no space left between the incisors and the molars. It is not infrequent to see a very small tooth just in front of the first grinder. This is a vestige of the old times and is commonly termed a "wolf tooth." It does not harm and has no ill effect upon the animal's eyes, as is sometimes claimed. The grinding surface of the molars normally wears in an oblique fashion, so that very sharp points form on the outside of the upper teeth and on the inside of the lower. These should be carefully removed. It is probable, however, that in most cases too much is taken away, and the grinding surface of the tooth is injured. A horse's mouth should be dressed once every year, and as has already been intimated, the young horse should be watched lest some irregularity in shedding cause him a great deal of suffering and perhaps cost his life.

The Cowboy's Return.

Backward, turn backward, oh, Time, with your wheels,
Aeroplane, wagons and automobiles.
Dress me once more in sombrero that flaps,
Spurs, and a flannel shirt, slicker and chaps.
Put a six-shooter or two in my hand,
Show me a yearling to rope and to brand,
Out where the sage brush is dusty and gray.
Make me a cowboy again for a day.
Give me a bronco that knows how to dance,
Buckskin of color and wicked of glance,
New to the feeling of bridle and bit,
Give me a quirt that will sting where it hits.
Strap on the poncho behind in a roll,
Pass me the lariot, dear to my soul.
Make me a cowboy again for a day,
Over the trail let me gallop away,
Thunder of hoofs on the range as you ride,
Hissing of iron, and smoking of hide,
Bellow of cattle, and snort of cayuse,
Short horns from Texas as wild as the deuce,
Midnight stampede, and the milling of herds,
Yells of the cowmen too angry for words,
Right in the thick of it all I would stay,
Make me a cowboy again for a day.
Under the star-studded canopy vast,
Camp fire and coffee and comfort at last,
(Bacon that sizzles and crisps, in the pan)
After the round-up smells good to a man,
Stories of ranchers and rustlers retold,
Over the pipes as the embers grow cold—
These are the times that old memories play,
Make me a cowboy again for a day.

GROTON.

Death of Mrs. R. P. Church at the Home of Her Daughter.

Mrs. R. P. Church died early Monday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles Heath, where she had made her home for the past five years. Mrs. Church had been ill and confined to the bed the most of the time for the past two or three years, suffering much at times, then rallying somewhat until, three days before her death, her condition changed rapidly for the worse. Of her immediate family, Mrs. Church is survived by two sons and two daughters, George Church of Bradford, Florin Jackson, who lives in the West and Mrs. Heath of this place, also two sisters, one living at Post Mills and the other at West Topsham. A prayer service will be held Thursday morning at her late home and the body taken to West Topsham, her old home, where the funeral will be held at 1:30, Rev. P. A. Smith officiating, and burial will be in the family lot beside her husband, who died twelve years ago.

M. D. Coffin was at St. Johnsbury Monday on business.

Mrs. Emma J. Clark and Mrs. A. W. Coffin went to St. Johnsbury yesterday.

Mrs. Bowman Beeman and two children of West Brookfield, Mass., arrived Monday and will visit her grandmother, Mrs. A. M. Heath, and sister, Miss Emma Jones, for a few weeks.

Nearly every man who owns a gun and is able to tramp, has been in the woods this week looking for deer, and a few have been successful. Leon Moulton was the first to bring one in, he shot in the edge of Topsham. It was a small buck in prime condition. Others who have secured the much sought game are James Frost, Fred Carpenter, A. M. Hoyer, the last named getting the largest yet reported here, weighing over two hundred pounds. Walter Dana, aged twelve years, started out in the early hours of Monday morning and went far into Groton pond woods. Before noon he had secured his deer but although a small one it was with great difficulty that he succeeded in getting it out where he dared to leave it to go after help. He reached the village with it sometime during the evening and sold the carcass at the market for $10.00 and went home a tired but happy boy.

Women In to Army.

To begin with the most important thing in Surgeon-General Torney's annual report (for the fiscal year 1909), recently issued, he says, "the government service threatens to become largely the refuge of women and of men who lack the training, the energy, and the ambition for private success." The percentage of women clerks in the surgeon-general's office is twenty-three. Hereafter he would like to see only men appointed. Apparently the only reason for this ungallant desire is that the women clerks are not amenable to discipline. The general health of the army was fairly satisfactory during the year in question. There was a somewhat alarming increase of venereal diseases, and the admission and death rate for tuberculosis were high, higher in fact than in any armies except those of the Spanish, French, and Dutch. In this connection better ventilation of barracks is urged. Overcrowded guard houses are still common, and that "sanitary abomination," the overhead or double decked bunk, is still in vogue at Fort Totten and Adams. Twenty-three thousand five hundred and twenty recruits were medically examined, and 1442.69 per 1,000 rejected as unfit for service. When it comes to the tropical stations remarkably good records and conditions are reported. There was not a single case of cholera among white American troops in the Philippines, and but seven of the native soldiers died of the disease, although the non-military natives were badly stricken. This remarkable result was achieved by the use of sterilized water and abstention from uncooked native vegetables. There was a general decrease of malarial infection. The Alaska station was, as heretofore, the most healthful. The surgeon general makes a strong plea for compulsory anti-typhoid vaccination, which he considers safe and unquestionably valuable.—New York Globe.
